Mrs. Joe Rihn of Castroville last week received word from the Bureau of Naval Personnel, Washington, D. C., that her eldest son, James Joseph Rihn, Phm. M. 2-c, was lost on Oct. 24, 1944, in the sinking of a Japanese freighter carrying prisoners of war off the East coast of China. Rihn had been held captive by the Japanese in the Bilbid Prisoner of War Camp, Philippine Islands, since the fall of Manila, where he was stationed at the time at the U. S. Naval Hospital. Another son of Mrs. Rihn, Burnell Vincent Rihn, T. M. 1-c, was reported missing and later declared dead by the War Department when the motor torpedo boat on which he was assigned received a direct hit on December 12, 1942, somewhere in the Pacific. A younger brother, Sgt. Maurice Rihn, U. S. Marine Corps, is stationed at San Francisco, Calif., after serving 36 months overseas. The boys attended school in Hondo while their parents resided here several years ago. Their aunt, Mrs. Milton Mechler, lives in Hondo.

The war brings tragedy close to almost every family—few are exempt. Among the list of casualties from Southwest Texas, published in the morning papers of June 29, was that of Pvt. Erwin H. DeMontel, Edinburg. Young Montel was the son of Lee DeMontel, a grandson of Charles DeMontel II (who moved from Hondo to Bandera about 1901), and a great-grandson of Charles DeMontel, Sr., one of the founders of Castroville. On his mother's side, he was a great-grandson of George Hay, Sr., a pioneer citizen of Bandera. His parents moved from Bandera to Edinburg some years ago. The only news the family had received at last report was the brief army announcement that he was killed on May 13, 1945, in the fighting on the island of Okinawa. The young man was a grandnephew of Mrs. Herman E. Haass and a second-cousin of Dr. O. B. Taylor and Mrs. Fletcher Davis, all of Hondo. America's 1,036,679 casualties leaves few families unbreathed.

Sgt. Raoul O. Bartientes reached Fort Sam Houston last Thursday night from overseas. He is now visiting his family here and will return to San Antonio Thursday where he will receive his discharge. Sgt. Bartientes has 121 points to his credit, having spent 32 months overseas and holding numerous decorations. He received the Belgian Citation, French Citation, U. S. Presidential Citation, two clusters, Bronze Star, Good Conduct Medal, Pre-Pearl Harbor ribbon and E. T. O. ribbon with seven battle stars. Sgt. Bartientes was in the tank corps and saw active service in Africa and the European theater of operations. During his long exile from home, he did not see a Hondo boy until he reached Fort Worth Thursday night and met Monroe Rucker on the train. Rucker was on his way to Mission, Texas, from Oklahoma, where he will attend advanced pilot training school.

Capt. M. L. McDowell, who has been stationed at Hondo Army Air Field as an instructor ever since his entrance into the Air Corps several years ago, has received his discharge. He and his wife and two little daughters, Mary Jo and Carolyn, will leave Friday for Smithville where they will make their home, and Captain McDowell will manage a mercantile store belonging to Mrs. McDowell's mother, Mrs. E. Adamcik. Captain and Mrs. McDowell have many friends in Hondo, as they have made this their home for many years, and were formerly members of the faculty of Hondo High School, and were active in social, civic and educational affairs.

We acknowledge receipt through the mail of the following new and renewal subscriptions: L. F. Faselier (new), Yancey; G. C. McAnelly (new), Star Rt.; M. W. Acers, U. S. Dept. of Justice (new), San Antonio; Pvt. Willard N. Wilson (new), Camp Hood, Texas; W. A. Bohlten, Warren, Ariz.; Mrs. Ed. Hutzler, Castroville; A. J. Schuchart, San Antonio; E. B. Haegelin, Rio Medina; Mrs. L. L. Dorsey, Dallas; A. W. Neuman, San Antonio; H. Steinel, Somerset; Mrs. A. T. Tuerpe, Lytle; E. E. Wilson, Yancey; P. A. Huegele, Devine; J. W. Hancock, San Antonio.

Mrs. Harrison Wilson of Yancey called one day this week to renew the subscription of her son, Plt. Sgt. Albert H. Wilson, of the U. S. Marine Corps. Sgt. Wilson spent 26 months overseas and took part in the many campaigns in the battle of the Pacific. He is now at Officer's Training School, Marine Corps School, Quantico, Virginia.

Pfc. Olen J. Koch writes from somewhere in China giving us a change of address, saying: "Since I moved about two months ago the Hondo news hasn't caught up with me and I sure miss the home news." Olen, son of Mr. Toby Koch, is with an Air Service Group and has been overseas for some time.

The Army Public Relations Service reports Pfc. Franklin M. Arbogast, whose home address is Hondo, Texas, has arrived at Baxter General Hospital, Spokane, Wash., from the European theater of operations. He was transferred from the station hospital, Camp Myles Standish, Mass.

NEWS NOTES

From The
Navigation School

Issued by the Public Relations Office, AAFNS, Hondo, Texas.

AERIAL DOUBLE AND TRIPLE-THREATERS GRADUATED

Hondo Field this week graduated another class of double and triple-threat airmen, most of them soon to be skyteam members shooting and bombing the heart out of Japan.

Already rated bombardiers or bombardier-guns, they received 13 weeks of aerial navigation training at Hondo Field, AAF Training Command installation, to earn the double or triple rating of bombardier-navigator or bombardier-navigator-gunner. All of this class of navigation trainees previously received commissions of second lieutenants or appointments as flight officers upon completion of bombardiering school.

Parents, wives, and friends of the class members were welcomed to the Post Theater graduation exercises by a high-ranking officer. The guest speaker, Major Ralph J. Jones, Boston, bemedaled navigator returnee now assigned here as Officers' Club officer, stressed teamwork in aerial missions in his talk.

Major Jones, 26, has 30 combat missions to his credit. He wears the Distinguished Flying Cross with one cluster, the Air Medal with three clusters, and the ETO ribbon with three battle stars. A B-24 crew member, he was group navigator for a heavy bombardment group. A Kelly Field navigation school graduate and former instructor at Hondo, the officer was overseas from Nov. 3, 1943, to Sept. 12, 1944. He is married and has two sons, the youngest only 3 weeks old. The family lives in Hondo.

Jack Teagarden's famous orchestra will be featured at an informal dance to be held at the Hondo Field Officers' Club Wednesday night, July 18, it was announced this week.

The band will play from 8 to 12 p. m. A free buffet supper will be served from midnight to 1 a. m. Officials said reservations should be made early at the Club.

Louis Armstrong's band is scheduled to play the Officers' Club on Aug. 4.

EM COMBAT CREWMEN MAY RETURN OVERSEAS

Enlisted combat crew returnees are permitted to volunteer to return to overseas duty as crew members provided they go into B-29 training. It was announced this week by Post Headquarters.

SWIM POOL HOURS SET

Swimming pool schedule for recreational swimming at Hondo Field was announced this week as follows:

USO VARIETY REVUE TO PLAY HAAF JULY 7

A sparkling variety revue, "You Said It," will be staged Saturday, July 7, at the Post Theater, the first presentation at 6 p. m. and the last at 8 p. m.

This exciting and amusing show is another of the series of victory units touring military installations under the auspices of USO-Camp Shows, Inc.

Appeal that rates with the best in entertainment is promised. Among the headlines are Tommy La Rose and Helene, the "girl with the radio mind." Tommy circulates through the audience, touching personal belongings, such as jewelry, and Helene, although unable to see the articles, identifies them immediately as Tommy makes the contact. Tommy served in the Army Air Forces for two years. Prior to that he has his own radio show in Los Angeles, a comedy hour. His entertainment career started as a dancer and comedian.

Other features of the show will be the Six Fast-Steppers, a chorus of stunning girls who recently returned from an overseas entertainment tour.

BILLION AND HALF GALLONS GAS, OIL TO EUROPE

In answer to the universal question as to where America's gasoline and oil has gone, it was reported this week that the U. S. Army Transportation Corps imported and delivered more than 1,500,000,000 gallons of gasoline and oil to depots and airbases on the European continent between D-Day in Europe and V-E day.

According to the War Department Bureau of Public Relations, in 1941 this amount would have been enough gasoline to operate every motorized vehicle in the world between New York City and Chicago.

Gasoline and oil needs still demand high priority in the Pacific war, where they must be transported longer distances and to a much wider area.

OVER 5,000 WACS NOW SERVING IN PACIFIC

More than 5,000 Wacs are now serving in the Pacific, according to Lt. Col. Mary Agnes Brown, WAC staff director for the Southwest Pacific.

Wacs are working in Australia, New Guinea, and the Philippines, performing many unusual and important jobs.

They are responsible for the operation of large telephone switchboards handling as many as 6,500 calls a day. Among other vital jobs they examine captured enemy material and route it over proper technical intelligence divisions. Wac typists handled 130,000 words a day during the Leyte campaign, much of it involving coding and decoding.

Several former Hondo Field Wacs are now serving in the Pacific area. It was announced that general recruiting for the WAC is continuing.

ALL QUIET ON HONDO FIELD THIRD ANNIVERSARY

It was a different story this Fourth of July for Hondo Field from the airbase's customary combined anniversary-Independence day activities. There was no post-wide celebration, only small parties and events in the evening.

No special July 4 activities in connection with Hondo Field's third birthday were held such as were staged on a large scale in celebration of its past two anniversaries. For virtually all military personnel it was work as usual.

"With the field's transition from navigation to one of the Army Air Forces' No. 1 war training jobs, that of B-29 Flight Engineering instruction," said Col. Robert B. Davenport, post commander, "the airbase found no time to devote to holiday festivities."

"With the fury of our attacks on Japan mounting under the full-speed-ahead order, we could spare no time from the tremendous and vital job at hand of B-29 Flight Engineering training, in addition to conducting our navigation courses."

Only events that took place at Hondo Field on July 4 were a league baseball game between the Hondo Comets and Kelly Field at 4 p. m.; evening dances at the NCO Club and Officers' Club; performances of Bobo the Magician and Company, at the Post Theater at 6 p. m. and Officers' Club at 9 p. m., and a USO dance in town.

SGT. RUPP ELECTED HEAD OF NCO CLUB

M. Sgt. Richard L. Rupp has been elected president of the Hondo Field NCO Club, succeeding T. Sgt. Ralph R. Hastings.

Sgt. Hastings served as chairman of last week's membership stag party when voting on new officers took place.

Other officers named: T. Sgt. William Ralph, first vice president; T. Sgt. Robert A. Mumford, second vice president; T. Sgt. Ralph R. Hastings, secretary; Sgt. Herbert W. Linneman, treasurer, and T. Sgt. James G. Cassidy, sergeant-at-arms.

Club members meet regularly the last Monday of each month. Memberships have increased considerably recently with the influx of men from other stations transferred here to assist in the operation of the B-29 Flight Engineer School.

RECORDED CONCERTS TO BE RESUMED

Resumption of recorded concerts of classical music probably next week is planned by the Special Service Office.

One of the most complete libraries of musical classics by the nation's outstanding symphonies and other orchestras has been collected at Hondo Field in the past two years.

The concerts were discontinued several weeks ago, but at the request of many officers and men and Wacs, it has been decided to resume the musical programs as soon as arrangements can be completed.

ENVIRONMENTAL SANITATION

"Environmental sanitation is the public health term for clean, safe housekeeping whether it applies to a private home and its surroundings or to towns and cities. Among other things it insures safe drinking water, proper garbage and sewage disposal, the safe service of wholesome food including milk, rat and insect control, and general cleanliness of the premises. However, for environmental sanitation to be effective, it is essential that not only public health officials but the citizens living in their respective homes or operating establishments serving the public cooperate wholeheartedly with the local sanitation policy," declared Dr. George W. Cox, State Health Officer.

"Consider, for example, the seasonal housefly hazard. It has been determined that 120 eggs are laid by a single female at one time and that a generation is produced every ten days at summer temperature. Thus, the possibility of reproduction during the warm months of a single fly runs into many millions. While the housefly does not bite, it is dangerous because it breeds and feeds upon both filth and food.

"Again, rats are the source of several diseases of man including plague, typhus fever, infectious jaundice, and trichinosis, to mention some of the more important ones. Homes can be made comparatively rat-proof by removing rubbish and garbage accumulations, and by closing avenues of access. Approved poisons and traps should be employed when a real problem presents itself.

rels will do much to eliminate the mosquito for householders. The householder needs to devote more seasonal attention to mosquito eradication than he is today if this is to be properly controlled.

"In general, good and thorough housekeeping, inside and out, is the personal and civic duty of every home dweller. It not only adds to the pleasure of living and removes disease hazards, but increases the appearance of one's surroundings."

HIGHWAY TO VICTORY

Only where Natural Gas is needed for the war effort can pipe lines be built today. And even with all the modern equipment at hand, the job is still one for pioneers. . . . Before the actual laying of pipe, our construction crews must prepare the "highway," better known as the right-of-way, through remote swamps and marshlands, through cultivated fields, and woods, under highways, railroads and streams. In some cases they must dig canals or dynamite out large roots or pieces of rock to clear the way for the actual construction. These men are truly soldiers on the home front. . . . Always the work of these valiant gangs is hard and hazardous but they carry on, day in and day out, doing their part willingly in their country's struggle for victory.

LISTEN TO THE RADIO

If the hope for future peace is to survive, the people of all nations must cultivate the important science of human relationship. This thought reflects the keynote in a radio address to be delivered over radio station KTSA at 4:30 p. m. Wednesday, July 11, by Joe C. Bettencourt, national officer of VFW.

The talk will be the 56th in a series of "Speak Up for Democracy" programs being sponsored by the Veterans of Foreign Wars. According to Mr. Bettencourt, the VFW believes that the teamwork which was employed to win the war must continue in the postwar world.

"The world security organization recently formed will depend upon teamwork for its blood," declared Mr. Bettencourt. "From now on we must attempt to settle our grievances in a civilized way. We should be able to find a basis for compromise and cooperation around a conference table."

"The VFW believes that economic fair play is as important as an international police force in the establishment of a peaceful world," Mr. Bettencourt added.

"We must scrap our old ideas about so-called foreign and domestic affairs. The word 'foreign' is misleading. It implies that events that happen thousands of miles away are 'foreign' to our interests. We know this is not true. For example, a low standard of living in Asia means that people who would otherwise be buyers of our goods are in no position to do any buying. Our own living standards are forced to go down because of resultant unemployment. In the same way, violations of human rights in other countries threaten our own freedom."

TEXAS AAF SURGEON WINS BRONZE STAR

Major Courand Rothe, flight surgeon in a Seventh Air Force Liberator group in the Palaus, has been awarded the Bronze Star and Air Medal for his service in connection with military operations against the enemy.

Early in the occupation of the group's base in the Palaus, Major Rothe and another flight surgeon, Capt. John J. O'Neill of Salem, Mass., helped rescue a wounded military policeman while in close range of enemy snipers, and saved the soldier's life with first aid treatment.

The two flight surgeons volunteered to accompany a patrol into the jungle to execute the rescue. The soldier was wounded in the chest so badly the surgeons had to perform a minor operation before he could be moved.

Major Rothe was presented the medals by Maj. Gen. Robert W. Douglass, Jr., commanding general of the Seventh Air Force.

Major Rothe has flown 10 combat missions and wears the Philippines liberation ribbon and three battle stars.

Mrs. Rothe, the former Ann Strain, and two children live at 451 Olmos drive.

I feel like I'm home already

As a kid I lived near the Southern Pacific Line. We got up when the "Argonaut" rolled by in the misty dawn and went to bed to the throb of the Sunset Limited thundering west into the night. I knew every engineer along the line and old Mr. Dan, the station agent, was my buddy from the time I was knee-high to a car wheel.

I just landed back in the States for my first furlough in 32 months. And stepping onto the platform of a good old S.P. train makes me feel like I'm home already.

* * *

That's the way most folks feel about the Southern Pacific — and that's the way we like them to feel. For in spite of our tremendously increased war traffic we are still trying to see that those who must travel can do so in comparative comfort. Though our service may not always meet our strict pre-war standards, there has been no rationing of friendliness and courtesy.

We appreciate your understanding and cooperation and hope you'll give us a chance to show you again some day just how smooth and efficient friendly Southern Pacific service is at its best.

PIONEER HONDO WOMAN PASSES

A recent note from Mrs. L. L. Dorsey of Dallas informs us that Mrs. Rush Johnson passed away on June 19, 1945, at the Protestant Old Peoples' Home at Arlington. At the request of a sister, her remains were buried in a plot owned by the institution.

Mr. and Mrs. Johnson were settlers at Hondo in the town's early days and resided here until Mr. Johnson's death a number of years ago. There were no children and left alone, Mrs. Johnson went to the home where she passed a tranquil old age and passed quietly away with little suffering. She would have been 86 years old had she lived until August 21 next.

THROUGHOUT the Spring, from the Rockies to the Atlantic seaboard, worried farmers searched the skies for signs of clear weather, but the cold rains fell relentlessly.

For more than a month the seed should have been germinating in the warm soil. Millions of acres lay unplanted because the ground was too wet for preparation of the seed bed and too cold for germination of the seed.

Only a generation ago there could have been but one outcome—crop shortage and food scarcity. Nature allows scant time for planting when the warm sun waits till late May or June before drying the soggy soil. Horses are too slow and tire too quickly to get the job done then.

But the farmers remember May of 1943—only two years ago—when their fast, untiring tractors averted crop failure. Then, too, rains flooded the fields and the month was all but spent before they could go in on the land and plant.

In 1943, most farmers drove their tractors from dark to dark, and longer. Many planted around the clock, working in two or three shifts.

They made one of the greatest crops in history.

In today's war-torn world—with hunger and disease already stalking many peoples—even one major crop failure could bring famine. This is why the sound of tractors and planting machinery was heard, day and night, from the Plains states to the Eastern seaboard—why headlights stabbed the darkness over the fields.

America's farmers are doing it again, in spite of an unprecedented combination of adverse circumstances—bad weather, shortages of machines and shortages of manpower. For the second time in three years, they are relying upon their tractor-powered machines to help rescue large areas of the world from catastrophe. More of these tractors are products of International Harvester than of any other company.

Romania Expropriates and Gives Lands to Peasants

One of the most drastic reforms of modern times took place recently in Romania when the government expropriated, without compensation, all lands owned by Germans and by Romanian war criminals and collaborators, as well as all land in excess of 125 acres in large estates, says Collier's. Among the properties expropriated are those belonging to churches, hospitals and King Michael.

The land is now being divided into farms of 12½ acres and given gratis to landless peasants.

The new government tire industry expansion program is geared to produce an additional 21,300 military tires a day, or 6,000,000 more a year.

Foam rubber is expected to replace familiar upholstery construction in automobile seats, saving nearly a foot in the length of the body.

Rubber springs already in use experimentally for automobile springs, and in actual operation on street cars, may speed all wheel transportation and greatly increase riding comfort.

W.N.U. SERVICE

THE STORY THUS FAR: Lark Shannon is heartbroken when she learns that her beloved horse, Madoc, is to be sold, but can do nothing about it. Her father, Rector Shannon, known as the "Riding Parson," had recently come jogging home in a pony cart, dead. Bethel North, nearest neighbor to the Shannons, held a note against Rector Shannon, and the sale of the horse, she said, would clear the note. Lark, now 18, tells Bethel she is planning to leave England for America, to marry David North, Bethel's son. A few days later David arrives from America and Lark goes to see him. Jaggers, Bethel's husband, offers to steal some money from Bethel's box under the bed, to help Lark.

CHAPTER III

Lark's heart was thudding in slow, heavy, pounding beats. David frowned. "I'm troubled about taking you on the long voyage over. . . . Norfolk is a great town for gossip, and I would not want to treat you in any way not right, Lark."

"Oh, you wouldn't! I know that, David."

He shook his head impatiently. "You know nothing of loose tongues, here in this back-water. . . . It might be—just might be the best for you to marry me, Lark. I must think about it."

"I don't want you to marry me, David. I—"

"You will have to leave decisions like that to me," David said sternly. "I must judge what is right and best."

"All right, David."

"Don't you want to marry me, Lark? I thought— But you act—"

"Oh, David, no girl wants a man to— to marry her—if he doesn't love her very much. I couldn't bear a thing like that, David."

"I have said I was fond of you." They could hear Jaggers coming down the stairs. "I think it would be natural, even seemly, Lark, for you to—for me to kiss you, Lark. . . ."

Warm, quick with love, Lark lifted her face to David, her lips tremulous against his firm straight mouth. She opened her arms to him, drew herself into his arms, clinging to him lovingly, her eyes suddenly brimming over.

"There, there," David said. "There, now, Lark."

Jaggers tiptoed in looking knowing and pleased. "Bethel forgot her key-ring," he said. "I haven't seen the inside of that box for years. She's got a sight of money. I found my own old money belt. I wore it in America. It's still filled with my bounty money, my money. There's no question of taking from Bethel, because it is my own money, Lark, and I give it to you."

David left on the day of his arrival, to see to the Cargoe Riske affairs. He was to meet Lark on the Tempora at the Liverpool quay. It was hard for Lark to believe in his ever having been in this house, to know she was set to go, even to call up David's face, clearly, in her mind.

No word had come from David since the Sunday visit, and Lark, packing and repacking her things, wondered if there was any substance, any possible reality to this plan for her going, for her going with David, David North, to—to marry him in the new country, to meet his friends, the fine Mistress Hastings, the gentlemen of the Cargoe Riske, perhaps. . . . Lark wasn't sure whether or not David had actually proposed to her, and yet she certainly remembered his saying, "Maybe it would be best for you to marry me. . . ." She held firmly to that, tried not to think.

Lark closed and snapped the little leather trunk that had been her mother's. She said, "Bethel, you've been charitable to me, and I want you to have the things I'm leaving—my furniture, and—"

Lark thought, I really am going. David will be at the ship. . . .

And Bethel, after saying she didn't know what use Lark's oddments would be to her, broke into one of her fits of remorse.

"You don't leave this house, Lark Shannon, without being married tight and proper to David. A marriage knot is a thing to hold to, now. What's to keep David from forgetting all about you, in that savage America country? He's got a head full of business now, always has had. It's a penny here, and a pound there, and that's what he's thinking about."

"He gets that fair enough," Jaggers, nervous as a setting hen these days, spoke up. "From you, Bethel. You be thrifty."

Jaggers stood silently by, during these farewell threats and tirades of Bethel's. But he thought about them. He and Lark had barely started their drive to Liverpool in the hired trap, when he said, "Bethel do have some right to what she pointed out, Lark. David was ever full of business. He was too busy to marry you proper, at home, because of that Runnymede ship he was searching. . . . What I'm thinking, is—well—"

"David will take care of me. Oh, Jaggers, I'm so happy, so—"

"Maybe I ought to of let you buy Madoc back with the bounty money." Jaggers swerved the trap to pass a turnip cart on its way to market. "Maybe you'd ought to of stayed safe here, till—"

"Without the farm I couldn't have kept him," Lark said. "With no stable, not even ground under my feet, I couldn't have. No, Jaggers, I'm set to go with David. . . . You were right, a little, I think, Jaggers. David is—I know he is fond of me."

For a long time Lark just sat there on the deck of the Tempora. The ship's bells marked the hours. And still David did not come. She shivered in the chill night wind and listlessly fastened her coat more snugly about her.

There was a great lot of running about and shouting of orders. Big Dan, the giant with the golden beard who was in charge of the stevedores, rolled the final casks down into the hold and sealed them with a vast square of tarpaulin. Once or twice, in passing Lark, he flung out a joke at her but she turned her head away and didn't answer him.

Presently dawn began to wash out the lantern and the moon. David hadn't come. . . . not yet. . . . but there was still time.

There was a stir and bustle on the quay below and Lark sprang to the deck-rail with all her courage and hope renewed.

A middle-aged man and a stylishly dressed young girl got out of a coach and came on board. They stared at Lark curiously as she turned and walked away from them, trying to hide the tears of disappointment in her eyes.

The gangway was being drawn up now under the direction of the mate. Lark came to him and laid her hand on his arm impulsively.

"Couldn't we wait a little longer. . . . just a few minutes? My friend, Mr. David North, has been delayed."

Trying to hide the tears of disappointment.

He isn't here yet, but he's coming, I'm quite sure. . . . He promised.

"I'm sorry, Miss." There was genuine concern in the mate's voice. "But the Old Man's said the word. We've got to take advantage of the tide, you see."

"Maybe that's David now!" Lark's straining eyes quickly seized on a figure running down the hill toward them.

Mr. Swalters hesitated and after a moment motioned Big Dan and his companion to hold the gang-plank in readiness to be dropped for the late boarder.

But it wasn't David. Lark could see that now. This was a slighter figure, a ragamuffin boy. As he panted on to the wharf he shouted and waved a note high above his head. Mr. Swalters gave the word of command for the gang to be lifted and called out to the boy to toss the note to him.

"It's for you, Miss Shannon," he said, catching it expertly and reading the address quickly.

Lark tore it open. Her fingers shook, and her heart was fluttering. "Quick, Miss," Swalters said impatiently. "Do you want to disembark? There's not a second to lose. No time for your bag. The anchor's already weighed, but I could send you ashore in a jolly-boat."

"No," Lark said in a small tight voice. "No, he says for me to go ahead. He had to make other arrangements. He sailed last night on another boat."

"That's hard luck, a beastly shame," Clink Swalters didn't quite know what to say. That was plain enough to Lark.

"It wasn't his fault," she said quickly. "His business plans changed at the last minute. You see, he was sent over by his company, the Cargoe Riske, on an important mission. Naturally, that had to come first with him."

"I see," Clink Swalters said thoughtfully. "So you'll be traveling alone. That's not very pleasant, sometimes, for a lady."

"I don't mind," Lark said. "And now, Mr. Swalters, if you'll tell me where I'll find my quarters. . . ."

"They're not much in the way of quarters," he said apologetically. "The only second-class arrangement we have is a tiny curtained cubby-cabin off from the main women's lounge where Minnie Buxtree sleeps with her bound girls. I wish we'd something better to offer you."

"I'll be comfortable there," Lark said easily. "I'd like to wash up before breakfast."

"You look worn out, my dear. It's been a long hard night for you." Clink's tone was sympathetic as he led Lark through a passageway and pointed to a door marked "Women's Saloon and Lounge."

"You'll have to pass through there," he said. "Your cubicle opens off the big room."

In response to Lark's thanks, Clink said he'd see her at breakfast before long. His tone was cordial and distinctly hopeful.

Entering the large saloon, Lark's searching glance took in a strange scene. A smoke-grimed lamp burned pallidly in the dim morning light, showing the recumbent figures of the dozen sleeping women in the hammocks which lined the walls. Minnie was squeezed in the central hammock. Above her a cross-stitched motto was tacked to the wall. Lark paused to read it.

"But who is this, what thing of sea or land—"

Female of sex it seems— That so bedeck'd, ornate, and gay, Comes this way sailing Like a stately ship"

Lark chuckled. Minnie's quotation was so extremely apt. Her amused eyes caught those of a just-awakened girl who was watching her. This girl was more refined looking than the others. She motioned for Lark to wait for her as she climbed down out of her hammock and, opening her portmanteau, took out a bit of soap and a linen towel, and pointed to the adjoining washroom. With a nod Lark drew back the curtain before her cubicle, opened up her bag, and got out her own toilet articles. Her nose wrinkled fastidiously in the airless stuffy room. Most of the bound girls, she noticed, didn't even have on night-robes but were lying in their homespun shifts, half-covered by the soiled blankets.

But the girl who had preceded her into the washroom was fresh and clean, and her dressing sacque had a breath of country lavender caught in its newly ironed folds.

"My name's Clelia," she whispered, pouring water into the stone-ware bowl from the crockery jug which stood on the shelf.

"What a pretty name," Lark said and introduced herself.

"The only thing I know much about is sewing," Clelia confided. "I'm going over as an apprentice to a mantua maker in Philadelphia."

Lark smiled at her companionably. She felt as if, already, she had found a friend. She hummed happily as she unfastened the little silver Scotch brooch from the rumpled frill at her neck and laid it aside on the shelf, while she fastened a bit of fresh linen about her throat.

Clelia said, "That isn't quite straight. Here, let me help, Lark," as her deft fingers found the inside button at the back of the collar line. Lark gave a quick little tug to straighten the frill, and the button popped off in Clelia's hand.

This was enough to send the two girls into peals of childish laughter. In an instant the curtain was flung back and a cross and sleepy Minnie stood there scolding them.

"Drat you two crowing roosters," she said crossly, "waking a body out of a sound sleep."

"We're terribly sorry, we just didn't think," Clelia's voice was genuinely contrite.

Minnie ignored her and stood watching Lark thoughtfully. "You're the lass," she said, "who was asking after David North, ain't ye? Well now, I know that lad, well as the corn on my great toe. Tried to tell you that last night, but you wouldn't listen."

Lark said, "You know David North, my David North?" wondering if there might be another one. It was not a too-uncommon name.

"Well now, I wouldn't know whether you might rightly call him yours or not. Maybe a certain young lady named Mara Hastings might have a word or so to say on that. Ever hear your David mention her?"

"Of course I've heard him mention Mistress Hastings," Lark said with spirit. "David said she was a good friend of his and that she'd welcome me."

Minnie considered this for a moment. "I've heard their two names linked in Norfolk-town," she said. "Ain't often a woman o' thirty cottons to a young skit from a man's home town. . . . Where's your fine David now?" Minnie asked with sly humor.

"His plans changed," Lark said briefly. "He couldn't sail with me."

"Maybe he come ahead on the Runnymede," Minnie hazarded. "I seen him in town night 'fore last with a huddle o' heathen gipsies who was sailing on that ole tub. He was dressed in pagan rags like them an' jabbering their own gibberish to em. I hollered at him, friendly-like, but you'd a think he'd never passed the time o' day with me at my toll-gate house to see him stare me through. I couldn't make it out for a caution. What trick's he up to now? I'd give a mint to know!" She eyed Lark with sharpened interest and frank curiosity.

Gay Cross-Stitched Tea Towels

HAPPY inspiration, putting kitty to work at household tasks; done in cross-stitch on tea towels, he'll make even dish-drying fun!

Never wash china patterned in gold in water containing soda.

A dress form does not solve all fitting difficulties. If you have one, use it, though, for locating and checking direction of hem and seam lines.

Use cotton thread to mend leather gloves. Silk thread will cut the leather and pull out again.

To remove the odor of fish from dishes, wash them in a strong hot solution of salt in water, without the addition of soap.

Powdered graphite, in lieu of oil, will keep door hinges from squeaking.

If your water bucket springs a leak, don't throw it away. Paint it to match your kitchen and use it for a waste paper can. Paste decorative motifs on it if you like and remove handle or let it remain as desired.

Eight-to-the-inch cross-stitch is easy embroidery. Pattern 7235 has a transfer of seven motifs 5½ by 8 inches; stitches. Due to an unusually large demand and current war conditions, slightly more time is required in filling orders for a few of the most popular pattern numbers.

ORDER OF ELECTION BY COUNTY JUDGE

THE STATE OF TEXAS COUNTY OF MEDINA

On this the 11th day of June, 1945, the Commissioners' Court of Medina County, Texas, at a regular term of said court, did consider a petition filed in this court on the 24th day of May, 1945, the previous term to this court, duly signed by more than one hundred freeholders of Medina County, praying for an election to be held throughout said Medina County for the purpose of enabling the freeholders of said Medina County to determine whether horses, mules, jacks, jennets and cattle shall be permitted to run at large in said county. And whereas, said Commissioners' Court did order said election to be held on Saturday, August 25th, 1945, throughout said Medina County to have said issue determined by the freeholders of said county and did also order me, as County Judge of said Medina County, to immediately issue an order for said election in accordance with law.

NOW, THEREFORE, by virtue of the authority vested in me under such order and by the laws of the State of Texas, I, Arthur H. It is further ordered that the polls throughout Medina County shall be opened for such election at all the usual voting places in the several election precincts in said county. Said election shall be held by the regularly appointed and acting election officers of each of such election precincts, and in so far as same are applicable, said election shall be held and conducted and the returns thereof made in accordance with the laws regulating general elections.

No person shall vote at such election unless he or she is a freeholder, and is also a qualified voter under the constitution and laws of the State of Texas. All votes at such election shall be by ballot, and voters desiring to prevent the animals designated herein from running at large shall place, or have printed upon their ballots the words "For the Stock Law," and those in favor of allowing such animals to run at large shall place, or have printed, upon their ballots the words "Against the Stock Law."

Said election shall be held for one day only, and on or before the tenth day after such election, the persons holding such election shall make due return of all votes cast at their respective voting places for and against said proposition to Arthur H. Rothe, County Judge of Medina County, who will tabulate and count said returns and ascertain and proclaim the result of said election in the manner prescribed by law.

Public notice of this order shall be given for at least thirty (30) days before the date of such election by publication thereof in some newspaper published in said county.

Witness the hand of the County Judge of Medina County, Texas, on this the 11th day of June, 1945.

The CORN Poetry

PERFUME OF WILD PLUMS

All odors come from substances like dreams,
They move us so and also pass away
Into forgetfulness, as silent streams
Flow in their caves throughout a sunless day.
And likewise drifts the perfume of wild plums
On springtime evenings in a country lane,
To make us homesick as the twilight comes
For lovely things which we could not attain.
But why did not we think of it before—
That blissful breath recalls the one we knew
In other days and brings to mind once more
An older setting for a rendezvous,
Like that which comes at times to everything
Possessing life, to try love's signaling!
—ALBERT ROSEVEAR.

PRAIRIE SENTINEL

The moon came sailing
Over the rippling waves
Of wind-swept grass
And paused on the crest
Of a rock-strewn hill.
Like a lonely sentinel
A coyote stands in silhouette
Against the moon's silver glow;
He points his nose
Towards drifting stars
And tells of his loneliness
By mournful wailing
And all thru the night
The restless winds, sighing,
Bring the sound
Of his lonely crying.

—BEATRICE BRISSMAN.

NIGHT'S SERENADE

Falling stars
With moon and Mars—
The network of the sky.

Waters glow
And softly flow.
And then they pass on by.

Pensively
The willow tree
Now sighs a lullaby.

—MIRIAM LOIS BARKER.

FALSE ALARM

The little ivy fingers squeezed
A crumbling rustic wall
And covered it so thoroughly
It seemed not there at all.

They squeezed so hard a brick fell out.

It scared the birds that hovered.
The ivy thought it was a gun
And squealed "I got-cha covered!"
—MARY O'CONNOR.

WEAPON

The powerfulness
That vaunts its power
Becomes victim of its own helplessness
In the face of power.

A New "House of Magic" for Postwar America

"...one of the strongest guarantees of progress and world peace is continuous scientific preparedness through industrial research."

General Electric has approved plans for a new $8,000,000 Research Laboratory. This expenditure has tremendous significance. Scientific research has contributed much to our progress as a nation.

"Many things have been discovered during this war, and we can and must develop them into better things for peacetime.

"Today we have 550 research people on our staff. These new facilities will not only give increased outlet for their abilities, but will provide opportunities for new research minds with new talents.

"From this new laboratory we think new achievements will come. In the past, G-E research has contributed much to better living in America—not only through new developments in x-ray, electricity, metallurgy, electronics and chemistry, but also through reduced cost and increased efficiency, as in the modern incandescent lamp.

"Even more than in the past the laboratory will emphasize research in pure science—continuing and expanding the work begun by Dr. Whitney and the late Dr. Steinmetz forty-five years ago.

"To find new facts of the physical world, to extend the limits of knowledge, is a forward step in creating More Goods for More People at Less Cost."

W. L. Windrow
President

GENERAL ELECTRIC COMPANY

New $8-million-dollar G-E Research Laboratory will be built five miles east of Schenectady, New York, on the Mohawk River. The geographic location offers special advantages for television, high voltage x-ray, and radar research. Buildings with 300,000 square feet of floor space will accommodate an expanded post-war research staff of about 800. Research rooms will be a scientist's paradise of equipment for experiments in chemistry, physics, mechanics, electronics. It is hoped that construction can start in six months.

THE CACTUS GUARD

This proves to be a sandy place.
God put me here to be on guard.
I must protect this yellow stretch
Against the king of winds, now barred.
You see that I have stacked my guns,
Each with a Spanish bayonet.
You see upon my breast a badge;
To me it seems a floweret.

At times this gleams much like a star
That shining angels gave to me.
It shows that I am true and brave,
Yet it attracts the honey-bee.

Then I am armed with tiny dirks
That shield me from the wild coyote.
All told, I like this little job—
I wear a military coat.

—WILLIAM HENRY KLOSE.

THOUGHTS

If thoughts reflect my mood and shape my face accordingly,
I must reflect with culture thoughts always upliftingly.
For thoughts may light or shade my countenance, and then,
Ascend the realm of souls where they would never end.

—OLIVA M. DIAZ

LISTEN, LAUGHTER

Let laughter listen to the rain
If she would trill her fullest measure,
If she would sing a livelier strain,
Let laughter listen to the rain
Whose echoes call the same refrain,
And multiply its pulsing pasure,
Let laughter listen to the rain
